

SIMPLIFIED

A first principles approach
to exponential growth

STIJN NOORMAN

TABLE OF CONTENTS

3	The Goal of This Book
4	Understanding Twitter Growth
7	Picking Your Niche
13	Building a Winning Brand
20	Profile Optimization
28	Tweeting Like a Pro
31	Hooks
33	Writing Rules
34	Commenting Like a Pro
36	Commenting Efficiently
38	DM Tactics
40	Giveaways
41	Newsletter
42	Monetization Simplified
45	Practical Gameplan
46	Final Important Words

The Goal of This Book

This book will become your guide to your first few thousand followers and beyond.

The strategies work.

I'm one of the fastest growing creators on X.

I paid thousands of dollars for this knowledge.

But you get it for free.

That being said, this book isn't a complete plan.

You can get my all my best growth strategies in the X Growth System and Aesthetic Writing.

But read this book first.

It's the best free Twitter growth tool available.

Some people have even printed it out (despite it being in dark mode).

So I promise it'll be worth your time.

If it is, check out the X Growth System and Aesthetic Writing (they're even better).

So let's break down what it actually takes to grow.

Understanding Twitter Growth

Twitter growth is easy once you understand it.

And the best way to understand it is through first-principle thinking. An example best explains this.

When Elon Musk started Tesla, he didn't copy the old way of making cars.

Instead, he asked himself: "What parts do I actually need to build a car?".

By asking this question, he identified what he actually needed to build a great car.

This is why Tesla cars have 10–100x fewer parts and this saves them time and resources.

So just like Elon, I asked myself: "What do I actually need to grow on Twitter?".

I identified the things I actually needed, and 17 months later I'm at 37,700 followers.

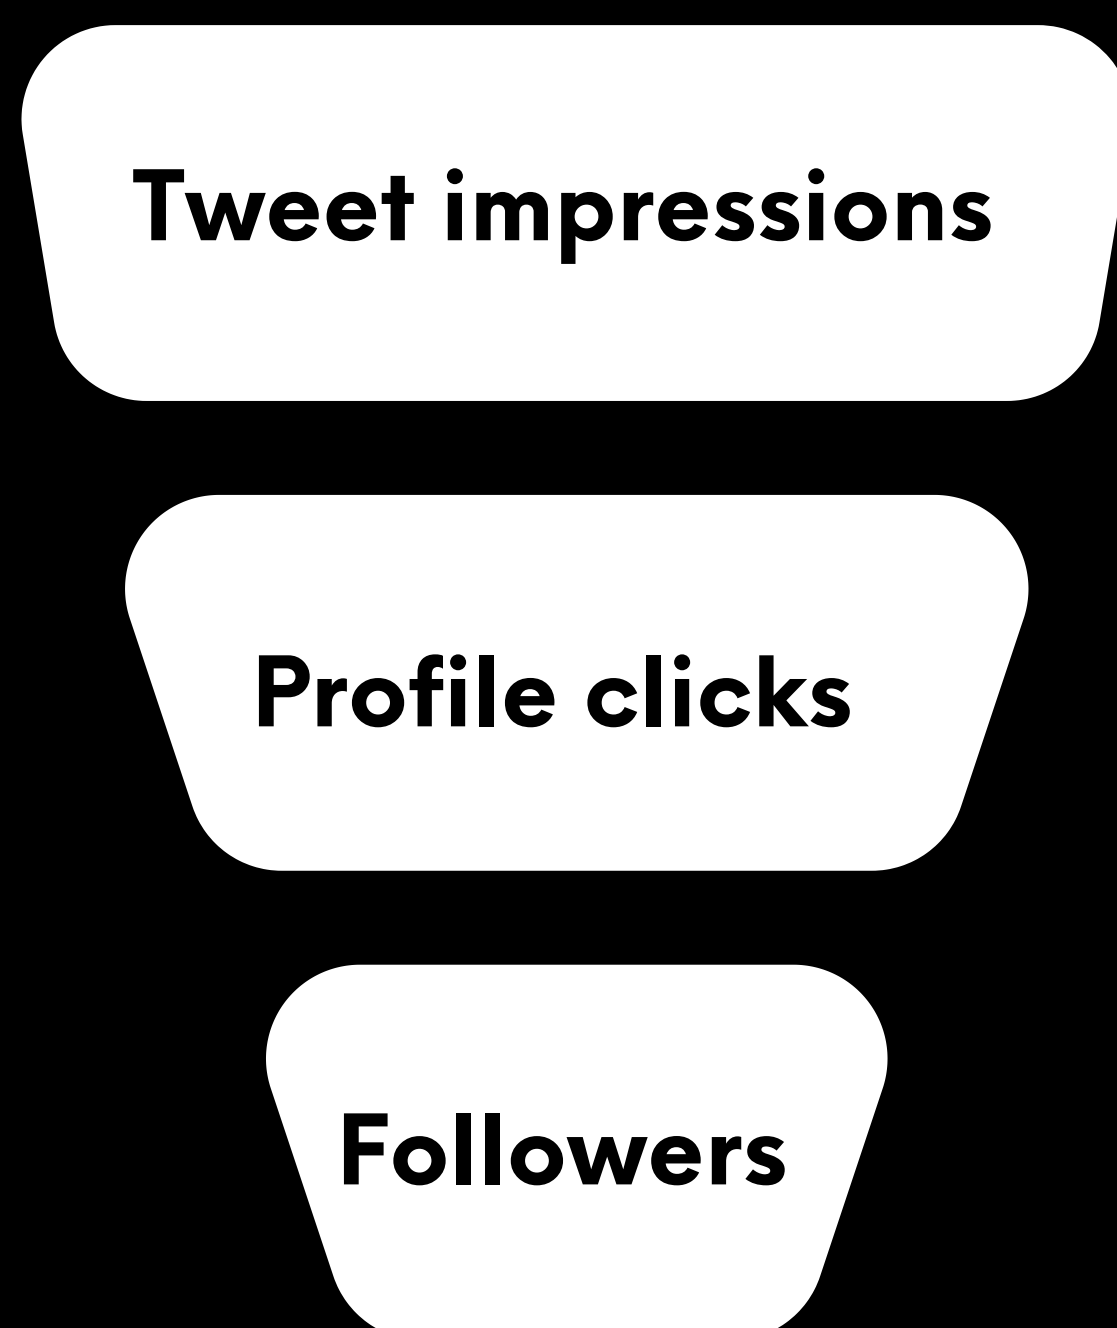

And later this year, I will hit 100,000 followers.

But I'm not special. You will get similar results if you implement what we're going to discuss now!

To grow on Twitter, you need people to follow you. So what makes people follow you?

Simple.

Tweet impressions → profile click → follow.

So to get more followers, you need more profile clicks.

And to get more profile clicks, you need more tweet impressions.

Sounds obvious, right? But how do you do this?

Let's break it down further.

To get more tweet impressions, you must:

- Write tweets.
- Leave comments.
- Build connections.

More impressions → more profile visits.

Optimized profile → more followers.

You have to optimize 8 elements of your profile:

- Bio
- Link
- Banner
- Username
- Pinned tweet
- Follower ratio
- Profile picture
- Blue checkmark

These are the rules of the Twitter growth game.

So let's talk about how you can win the game.

We'll start with picking your niche.

Then I teach you to build the foundation for a winning brand.

And then, we'll talk about profile optimization, tweeting 101, and DM seduction.

Picking Your Niche

It starts with your niche. Niche picking is hard.

You want to do everything, but this ensures you won't help anyone.

That's why you have to niche down – for now.

When you're bigger, you can expand.

Dan Koe didn't start with 'pioneering the future of work through philosophy, curiosity, and the internet.'

He started with web design.

As he got bigger, he expanded and became a niche of his own.

You can do this too, but you need to start by stacking skills one at a time.

Niching Down

I hate the idea of niching down.

But you have to understand that it isn't permanent.

You're niching down your next move.

You're not niching down your long-term vision.

Starting with one thing is just the fastest way to make this long-term vision a reality.

Picking your niche is like juggling.

If you start to juggle with 3 balls, it doesn't work.

That's why you start with 1 ball.

You obviously don't want to do this forever.

But it's the fastest route to juggling with 3 balls.

If you don't do this, you'll only slow down your progress.

So focus on mastering one skill first, then expand.

So how do you select your first niche?

8 By picking your Ikigai. Let me explain.

Your Ikigai

The Japanese have a concept called 'ikigai'.

It's basically your reason for being.

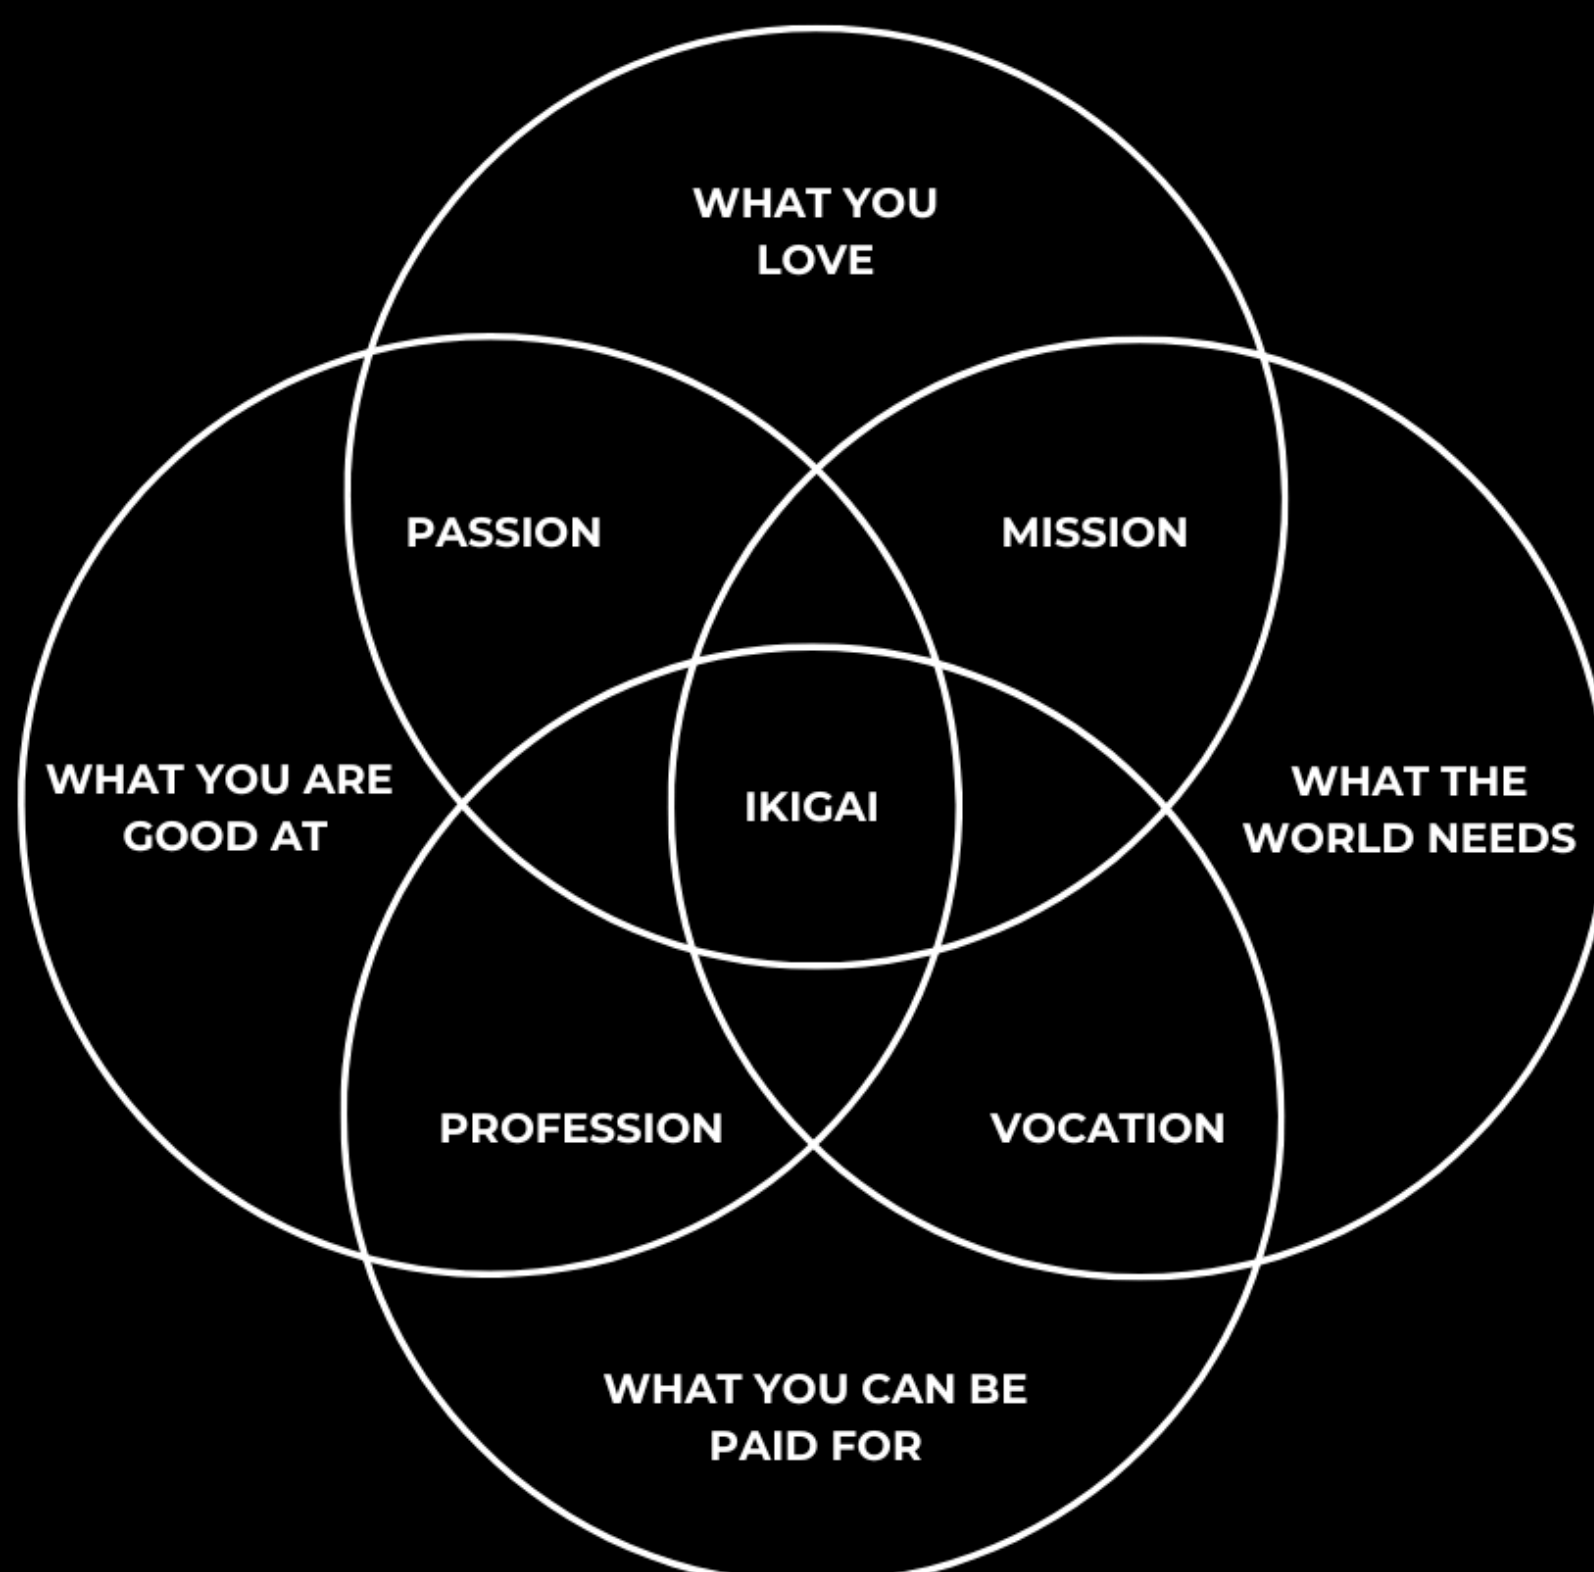

It's the source of purpose, fulfillment, and meaning in your life.

It combines 4 different elements:

- What you love
- What the world needs
- What you are good at
- What you can be paid for

Your niche is at the intersection.

Write down your answers and look for overlap.

Brand Ikigai

Your Ikigai is your reason for being.

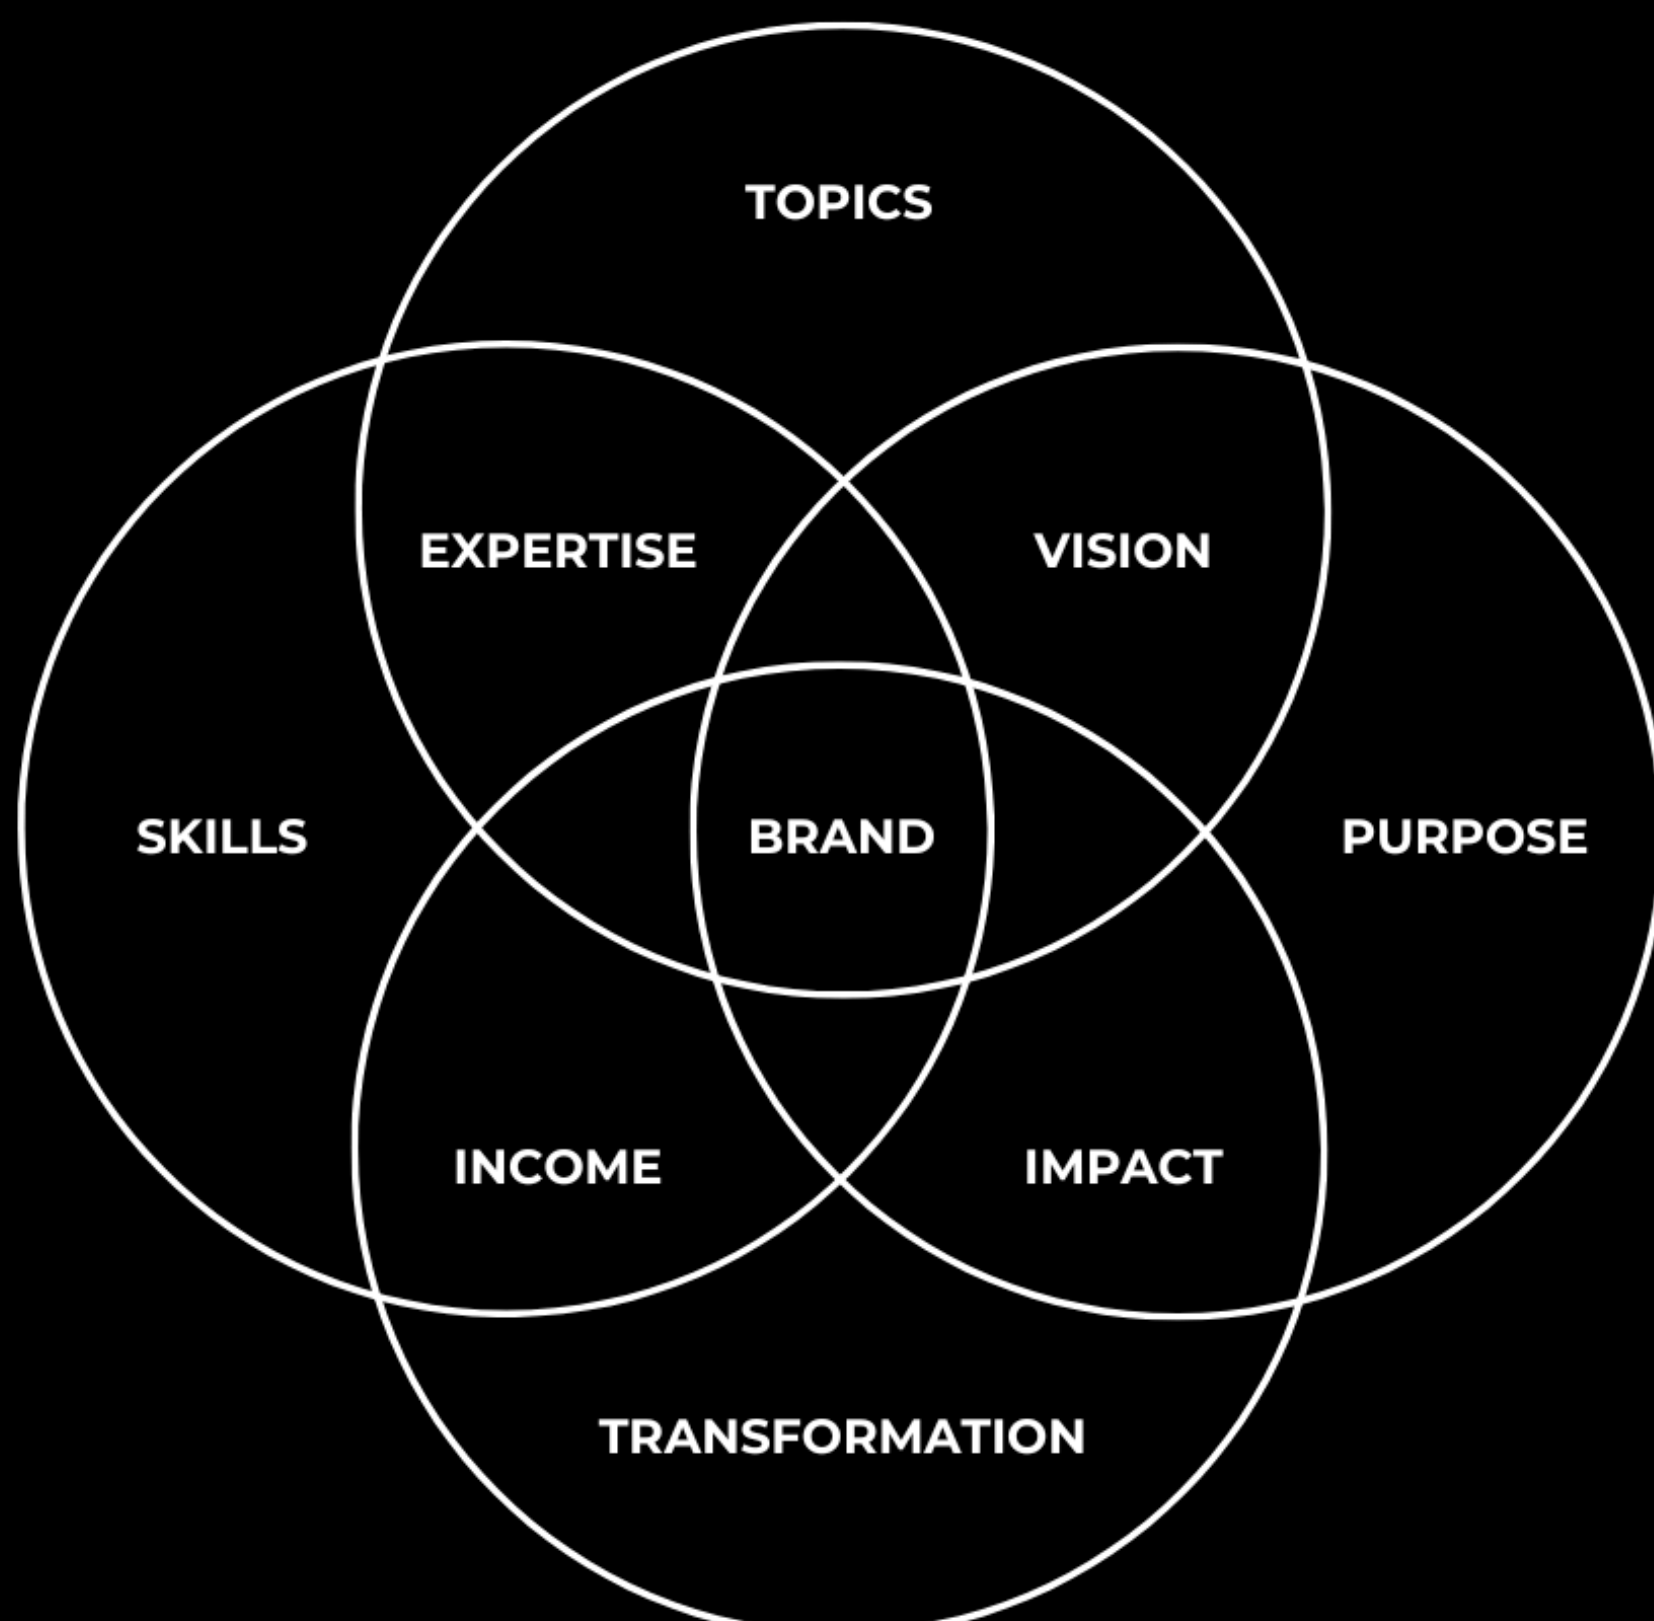

Your Brand Ikigai is your reason for brand.

It's why your brand exists.

It's at the intersection of:

- Topics: These are your interests.
- Skills: These are the skills you've learned.
- Transformation: The change or value you bring to your audience.
- Purpose: This is the bigger picture that your transformation helps people achieve.

Your Brand Ikigai is at the intersection.

"I can't find my niche"

Half of you will find your niche with your Ikigai.

The other half won't have skills or hobbies they can monetize (just like me in the past).

This isn't a problem.

It's an opportunity to choose where you start.

However, some skills are definitely more profitable than others, so here are some ideas:

- Sales
- Design
- Writing
- Marketing
- Copywriting
- Audience building

These are hard skills everyone on Twitter needs.

And I believe Twitter/X will blow up in the next years because of Elon Musk.

"During a gold rush, sell shovels."

Some will say: 'But it's too saturated'.

True, but let me tell you why that isn't a problem.

"My niche is too saturated"

I live in the Netherlands, a small country in Europe.

Football is extremely popular here.

Every child wants to be a football player.

So it's incredibly saturated.

But there are still enough people becoming pros.

Why?

There are:

- Bad players
- Decent players
- Good players
- Exceptional players

Bad and decent players don't stand a chance.

Good players can some money.

Exceptional players make it to the top.

Your niche is the same.

It's full of bad, average, and good players.

So if you commit to becoming exceptional, you'll always do very well in any worthwhile niche.

Building a Winning Brand

Congratulations, you've picked your niche.

But this gives you a new problem:

You have to find a way to stand out.

How do you do this?

Brand positioning.

This is basically how your audience sees you.

It's what makes you different from others.

It's who you serve, what you give them, how you give it to them, and how this differs from others.

For excellent positioning, you need 5 things:

- Target audience (I help _).
- Pain points (I help them solve _).
- Key benefit of your offer (My solution gives them _).
- Competitive advantage (I'm better than others because of _).
- Differentiator/USP (I'm different from others because of _).

Positioning is important, but you still need more.

Good brands make people feel a certain way.

Just think about Apple.

A simple apple icon gives you a certain feeling.

It gives you certain expectations and thoughts.

That's their brand.

This didn't happen by accident.

They strategized, and you can do the same.

Your brand needs:

- Enemies: your anti-vision
- Values: what you stand for
- Purpose: why you value this
- Mission: how you achieve it
- Vision: your highest ambition

This is what makes your brand unique.

If there are thousands of designers on Twitter, these things will set you apart.

If you nail these things, your brand stands out in a sea of copiers and boring brands.

The Attractive Character

This is a character you create that turns followers into loyal fans.

It isn't fake though.

It's a real person businesses use to tell compelling stories and create a personality for their brand.

In the case of a personal brand, you're the attractive character.

You must start by choosing one of the 4 personality types:

- The leader.
- The reluctant hero.
- The reporter or crusader.
- The adventurer or crusader.

But it doesn't stop here, you need much more.

I could paraphrase Russell Brunson, but he already explained it perfectly.

So check out this site to build your attractive character:

<https://www.clickfunnels.com/blog/attractive-character/>

Almost nobody does this, so it makes your brand stand out.

Your Brand Archetype

Your archetype represents the essence and values of your brand.

It's literally your personality.

So pick what's truly authentic to you.

Don't pick something because it sounds cool.

Your audience will instantly pick up on it if you're trying to be something you're not.

Authentic weird people are 10 times better than inauthentic perfect people.

Read all about brand archetypes on this site:
<https://marchbranding.com/buzz/brand-archetypes/>

Emulation

How do you build a great personal brand?

Easy, steal.

Wait what?

How can you say that?

Hear me out.

The best way to become a great creator is to:

- Pick 5 creators you like
- Look at what works for them
- Analyze why it works
- Pick the parts of their brand you love
- Incorporate it into your own brand
- Mix it together
- Find your unique angle and positioning
- Use your own personality, stories, ideas, and experiences

Most people won't tell you this, but this is how you actually build a great brand.

You look at what works, emulate what you like, and turn it into your own unique thing.

Dan Koe did it. I do it. And you'll do it (if you want to build a great brand).

I know you think your brand is unique.

But it probably isn't.

Thousands of people are doing the same thing.

So you might as well study the greats, learn from them, and find your own unique angle.

Your brand is your story, your current niche is the next chapter of your story.

Taking a similar route or going to a similar destination isn't copying.

Just don't become a watered-down version of them.

If you copy Dan Koe, you'll be a lesser Dan Koe.

Let him inspire you, but build your own thing.

Emulate great creators and mix in your personality, stories, and experiences to stand out.

Learn from the people ahead of you.

Grow with the people beside you.

And teach the people behind you.

Brand Awareness

There are 3 phases you need to go through to make people aware of your brand.

Know → like → trust.

First they have to know you:

- Leaving good comments
- Highly engaging content
- Connecting via DMs and calls

Then they have to like you:

- Mere exposure effect: the more they see you, the more they like you.
- Humor, kindness, relatability, confidence, familiarity.
- Great advice, funny comments, stories, similes, writing confidently.

And then they have to trust you:

- Honesty
- Reliability
- Consistency
- Competency
- Transparency

Once they trust you, they're part of your tribe.

You now know how to build a winning brand, so let's talk about how you optimize your profile.

Profile Picture

Your profile picture is the first thing people see.

So it has to look good.

There's no one size fits all, but I'd recommend answering the following questions:

- Does it build trust?
- Does it capture attention?
- What's the best lighting to use?
- Which direction do you look in?
- What vibe do you want to give off?
- Will your target audience like this photo?
- Does it look like it could be a 100k account?

Whatever you choose, make sure it:

- Looks clean. Use a decent camera or even your phone. Lighting is key. I'd recommend using front lighting or Rembrandt lighting. Also edit it a bit with Photoshop or Canva so it looks cleaner (or hire someone).
- Builds trust. Science has found that the best way to do this is by smiling. I prefer a subtle smile as it combines seriousness with trust.
- Gives off your vibe. This is mainly about the colors. I like black and white colors because it gives off a minimalistic and philosophic vibe. Look at a color psychology wheel and pick whatever fits your brand best.

So how do you know which profile picture you should pick?

Easy, steal it. Again?! Yes, hear me out.

The best way to pick a profile picture is to:

- Look at profile pictures
- Save the ones you like best
- Emulate the one you like best

Don't copy it 100%, but use it as inspiration. Once you've saved 5-10 pictures, you'll have a good idea of what picture you want for yourself.

I liked Andrew Huberman's picture, so I made something similar.

It's the same but different, and this is the goal.

Don't change your picture too often because people might not recognize you anymore.

Banner

A good banner is a 'nice to have.'

The most important things are that you:

- Don't copy others
- Don't pick something ugly that repels people

Keep it simple, you can:

- Give for your vibe
- Tell people what they can expect

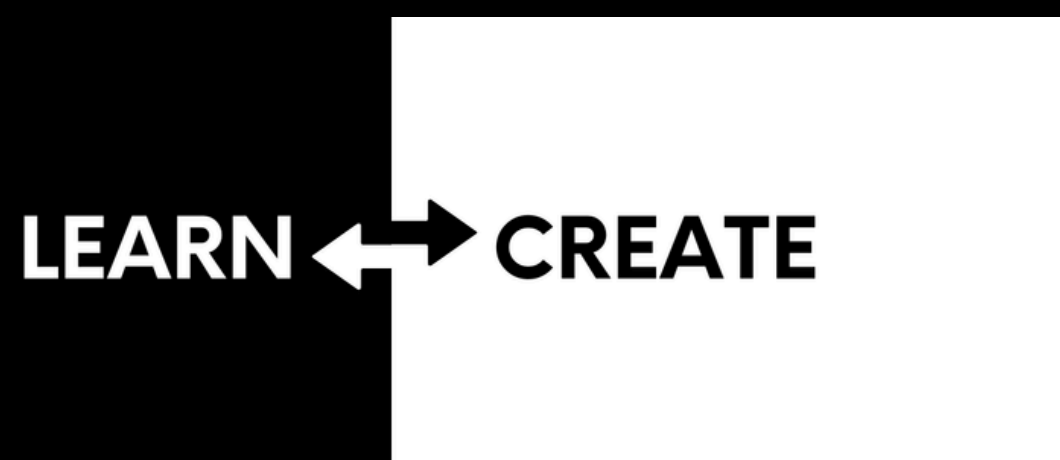

There are many ways to do this:

- Your newsletter
- Something you're selling
- Something you've achieved
- An image that gives off your vibe
- A design that describes what you do
- A few words that describe what you do

If you're unsure, you're in good company.

Just write a few words about what you do.

Here's my current banner:

It gives off my vibe (minimalistic and philosophic), and it shares a bit about what I write about (writing, building, and self-improvement).

Bio

Your bio is your creator CV.

It's an opportunity to show people what they can expect when they follow you.

A good bio includes 4 things.

My bio isn't perfect.

But it's clear.

That's the most important part.

If you're a beginner, social proof might be difficult to include. So make sure you focus on the first two parts.

1. What you do

2. How you do it

3. Who you help

4. Social proof

Username

This one is easy.

You want to pick something that:

- Is easy to remember
- Fits your brand/niche
- Contains your name (or a part of it)
- Looks clean (no numbers, underscores etc.)

My @ is currently @stijnnoorman (my real name).

Not ideal since English people don't know the 'ij' sound.

Which is pronounced 'ei'.

As in (Ein)Stein.

I've stuck with my name for now.

But I might change it later since I want to become one of the best writers in the world.

And having a name that's easy to pronounce is useful for that.

But anyways, the most important thing is that you keep your name simple.

Use your own name or something similar.

Link

Including a link makes you look more credible.

It shows people you're working on something.

Options are:

- Linktree
- Website
- Email signup

It's best to have a website.

But if you're starting out, I wouldn't create one yet.

Just get a simple Carrd page to collect emails.

Once you're ready to level up, create a website (or hire someone to do it for you).

I use Webflow (aff) for my website because it's the best one in my experience.

But you can make great websites with other tools as well.

The most important part is that you have a place to capture emails.

Twitter Blue Checkmark

Getting a blue checkmark is like dressing well.

Do you need it to be successful?

No.

But it shows people you're serious and it gives you some benefits.

Here are the ones that I think make it worth it:

- Commitment
- 50% fewer ads
- Text formatting (bold etc.)
- Longer tweets (up to 25000 characters).
- Undo/edit tweets shortly after sending it.
- Small boost in comments and search ranking.

So for me, the blue checkmark is worth it.

It shows commitment, allows me to write long tweets, and has a few additional nice-to-have benefits.

If you're going to spend more than an hour per day on Twitter, then you might as well spend a bit of money to make your account look better.

<https://help.twitter.com/en/using-twitter/twitter-blue>

Follower Ratio

Humans make decisions based on social proof.

So don't be the person who follows 1000 people but only has 100 followers.

This makes you look like a follow-for-follow account or a content consumer.

Don't randomly follow people.

- Leave valuable comments
- Connect with them via DMs
- Find accounts you generally like

If they don't like you, no problem.

There are enough other people on Twitter.

Keep repeating this process until you have a great group of creators you like.

You have to create a 'dream 100 list', but more on that later in this book.

Make sure you don't (un)follow too many people in a short amount of time to avoid a ban.

20 per day is safe. Only do this if you're under a couple of hundred followers. Update as you grow.

Pinned Tweet

Your pinned tweet is your biggest flex.

It's the first tweet people read when they click on your profile, so it has to be a good one.

It's best to have:

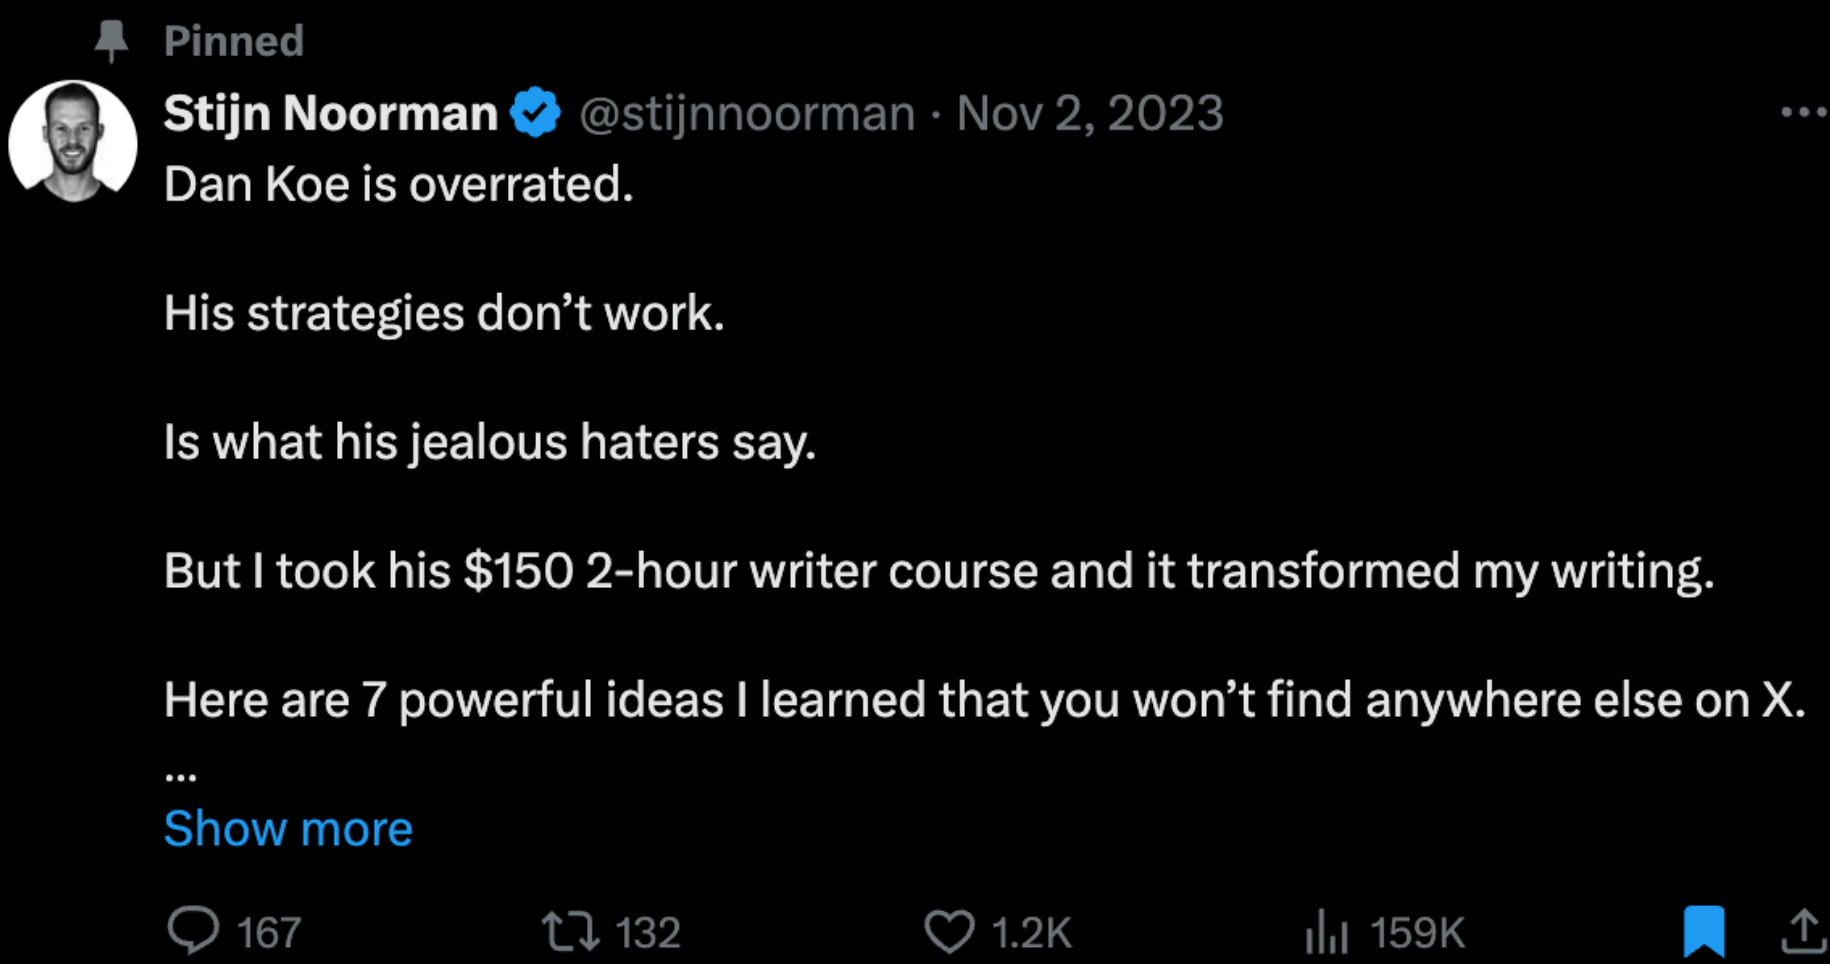

- An interesting personal story
- A valuable thread or long-form tweet

The story helps you show authenticity.

The valuable post helps you build authority.

EXPERTISE

Growth and trust

The RTs + likes also give some extra social proof.

If you implement all of this, you'll have a fantastic profile, so let's talk about how you can get more profile clicks now.

Tweeting Like a Pro

You write tweets for your audience.

So you have to try your best to understand them.

I've done the homework for you.

There are 3 reasons why people read your tweets:

- Education
- Inspiration
- Entertainment

Every tweet you write should aim at one or more of these things.

If you do this, people get value from it.

They're either entertained, inspired, or smarter.

This book focuses on first principles so I don't have time to give you all the examples that work.

If you want to know exactly what to post, check out the X Growth System and Aesthetic Writing.

Let's take a look at the tweet frameworks you can use to achieve these tweet goals.

Tweeting Simplified

When you're a small creator, nobody sees your tweets.

This is why commenting is so important.

But we'll get to that in a minute.

First, we have to look at how often you should post and what kinds of tweets you should post.

Everyone starts with random tweets but eventually, they start writing these tweets:

- Authority tweets. This shows your expertise and establishes credibility and trust.
- Growth tweets. This provides value. These are usually simple self-improvement tweets.
- Personality tweets. These tweets show your personality. This helps to demonstrate authenticity and connect with people.

People come up with all kinds of 'unique' names for it, but they're just putting their own label on these tweets, it's called the GAP framework.

I recommend using Hypefury to schedule your tweets.

It also allows you to schedule content for LinkedIn, Instagram, Threads, and TikTok.

Hooks

I will tell you the #1 way to go viral within 2 minutes.

Curious?

That's the point.

This is what's called a hook.

It instantly captures the reader's attention.

Hooks are the most important part of a tweet.

Without a good hook, people won't read the rest of your tweet or thread.

They deserve their own book, but for now, I'll give you the basics.

Hooks should focus on 4 things:

- Relevance. The more relevant you can make it for your ideal reader, the more likely they are to read it.
- Awareness. Make sure your ideal follower will know what you're talking about.
- Results. Inform the reader of the benefits they'll get if they read your tweet.
- Emotion. The best hooks tap into the reader's emotions, f.e. curiosity, excitement, or fear. You do this by aiming for pain points they might have or things they desire.

Besides this, there are additional guidelines you should follow when writing hooks.

- Spark curiosity
- Make your hooks concise
- Write with the reader in mind
- Make it relatable or shocking
- Focus on evoking one emotion
- Keep them short (1-2 sentences)
- Use numbers, unique things, or intriguing facts

These are the guidelines and the psychology behind hooks.

Implement this, and you will capture your reader's attention.

There's more to writing hooks, but what I just explained is the 20% that gives you 80% of the results (if implemented correctly).

I also have an ebook on writing hooks that explains it in more depth.

If you leave me a testimonial here, you can get it for free. DM me once you've done it so I can give you the ebook! (extremely low effort testimonials don't count).

So now that you know how to capture attention, let's talk about how you can keep it.

Writing Rules

Writing is the foundation is your brand.

It has to be useful and look good.

So put effort into it.

Here are important tips to keep in mind:

- Cut the fluff
- Use the rule of 3
- Write as you talk
- Write first, edit later
- Be a smart polarizer
- Use bullet points/lists
- Add interesting images
- Write in an active voice
- Avoid complicated words
- Vary your sentence length
- Read your tweets out loud
- Use repetition to create impact
- Use humor for more engagement
- Use metaphors, similes, and analogies
- Use white space to make it look better
- Keep your sentences short when possible

There's much more to writing that I explain in Aesthetic Writing.

But this will already set you apart from 90%.

33 Aesthetic Writing will make you top 0,001%.

Commenting Like a Pro

If you're below 3000 followers, most of your growth will come from leaving good comments.

It sucks, but it's a necessary part of Twitter growth.

More comments → more impressions → followers.

But leaving bad comments won't help you.

And commenting on bad accounts won't help you either.

So you have to make a list of creators you love.

This is your 'dream 100' list.

Mainly pick accounts around your size, accounts a bit larger than you, and a few +100k accounts.

Their engagement and type of audience (niche) are more important than their follower count.

Keep improving this list as you grow.

You can start including bigger accounts once you get bigger yourself.

You can also do this as a small creator, but it probably won't be very effective yet.

So how do you comment the right way?

Here are some do's and don'ts.

Don't comment:

- Useless emojis
- 'I agree' tweets
- Hate comments or needy comments
- About things you don't or can't know
- Their tweet rewritten in different words

Avoiding these things is important. You don't want to be known as the person who leaves bad comments. If you never comment anything good, people will stop reading your comments.

So instead, here are some do's:

- Make a joke (don't force it)
- Share a short, relevant story
- Add to the tweet with a new perspective
- Write a smart phrase, metaphor, or simile
- Give your experience with the tip if you've actually tried it for yourself

In short, you should use comments to:

- Connect
- Add value
- Show your personality

Tweet like a pro, comment like a bro (and DM like a CEO).

Commenting Efficiently

Engaging is necessary, but time-consuming.

Luckily, there are ways to do it much more efficiently. I wish I knew this sooner.

Here's my system to get a ton of engagement with 30–60 minutes per day:

You've already created your dream 100 list.

Make sure most of them are your size.

This increases the likelihood that they'll engage with you.

Also include a few big creators.

Aim for:

- 75% your size
- 15% a little larger
- 10% 100k accounts

I personally go mainly for accounts that have great engagement and are a bit larger or as big as me.

Just make sure not all of them are too big because they won't engage back with you.

Now go to pro.x.com.

This is the site you'll use to engage.

Create a column and select your dream 100 list.

This adds your list to your deck.

Select 'most recent tweets' in the column.

Now go to settings and click on 'search tweets.'

This allows you to filter likes, replies, and RTs.

Don't spam fast comments to avoid shadow bans.

Set a timer for 15 minutes and start commenting.

If you do this 3 times per day, you'll easily write 30–60 good comments per day and people will start to engage with your content as well.

Also take some time to react to the comments you're getting.

Try to like every comment you get, and I respond to the comments you like best.

The more you reply the better, but it gets time-consuming quickly so don't feel pressured to do it.

DM Seduction

DMs are where you build real connections.

Before I start, here are some big don't's:

- Never be needy or butthurt
- Never ask people to follow you
- Never ask why people unfollowed you

Just assume you have to improve your content if people don't follow you (anymore).

Here are the steps you should take:

- Find someone you want to DM. Look for accounts you like while you're commenting.
- Send them a compliment. If they're working on something cool or if they tweeted something cool, tell them why you think it's cool. Be human. This usually gets your foot in the door, but if it doesn't, move on. You gave them the opportunity to connect with you, and they didn't take it. No problem, move on. I don't even check if people ghost or unfollow me.
- Show interest in them. Most people love to talk about themselves. So ask what they're working on. It's a great ice-breaker.
- Lead with value. Try to provide value to the other person if you can. It's critical that you don't expect anything in return though. Giving with expectation isn't giving.
- Move it to Telegram if it clicks.

DM Walks

DMs are time-consuming.

It can take up a ton of time.

So instead, you can go for a walk to answer DMs with voice messages.

The benefits?

- It's faster
- You get sunlight
- Reduces social anxiety
- You learn to speak better
- You get used to speaking English
- Walking boosts cognitive functioning
- You mentally prepare yourself for spaces
- You get over your fear of recording yourself
- The other person gets more familiar with you

Keep your voice messages short tho.

Nothing is more annoying than long voice DMs.

You don't want to waste people's time.

Only send longer ones if you receive long ones or if someone asks you to explain something.

I stopped doing this but it's quite useful to get over your anxiety of doing videos or calls.

Giveaways

Record everything you learn.

You forget your past struggles.

This is the curse of knowledge.

It becomes obvious to you when you know it, and you think everyone else also knows it.

But they don't.

That's why you have to record everything.

Once you've done this for a while and have 500 followers, you can create your first lead magnet.

A lead magnet is a valuable free resource that you give your followers for their email addresses.

This is what this e-book is.

I gave you a ton of free value and you gave me your email address.

Treat their email well if you want to keep it.

If you do this, it's win for both of you.

I explain in-depth how to create high-quality lead magnets in the X Growth System.

Your Newsletter

I want you to start building your email list.

Newsletters are a great opportunity to:

- Sell valuable products
- Get future sponsorships
- Practice long-form writing
- Gives you audience more free value
- Communicate directly with your audience
- Share stories to build deeper connections

This list isn't exhaustive.

Your email list is your real tribe.

Your audience on social media is rented.

But nobody can take away your email list.

So start to use it to:

- Connect
- Help others
- Provide value
- Sell valuable stuff

Make sure you overdeliver when you sell.

I use Kit (aff) for my newsletter.

Monetization Simplified

People overcomplicate selling.

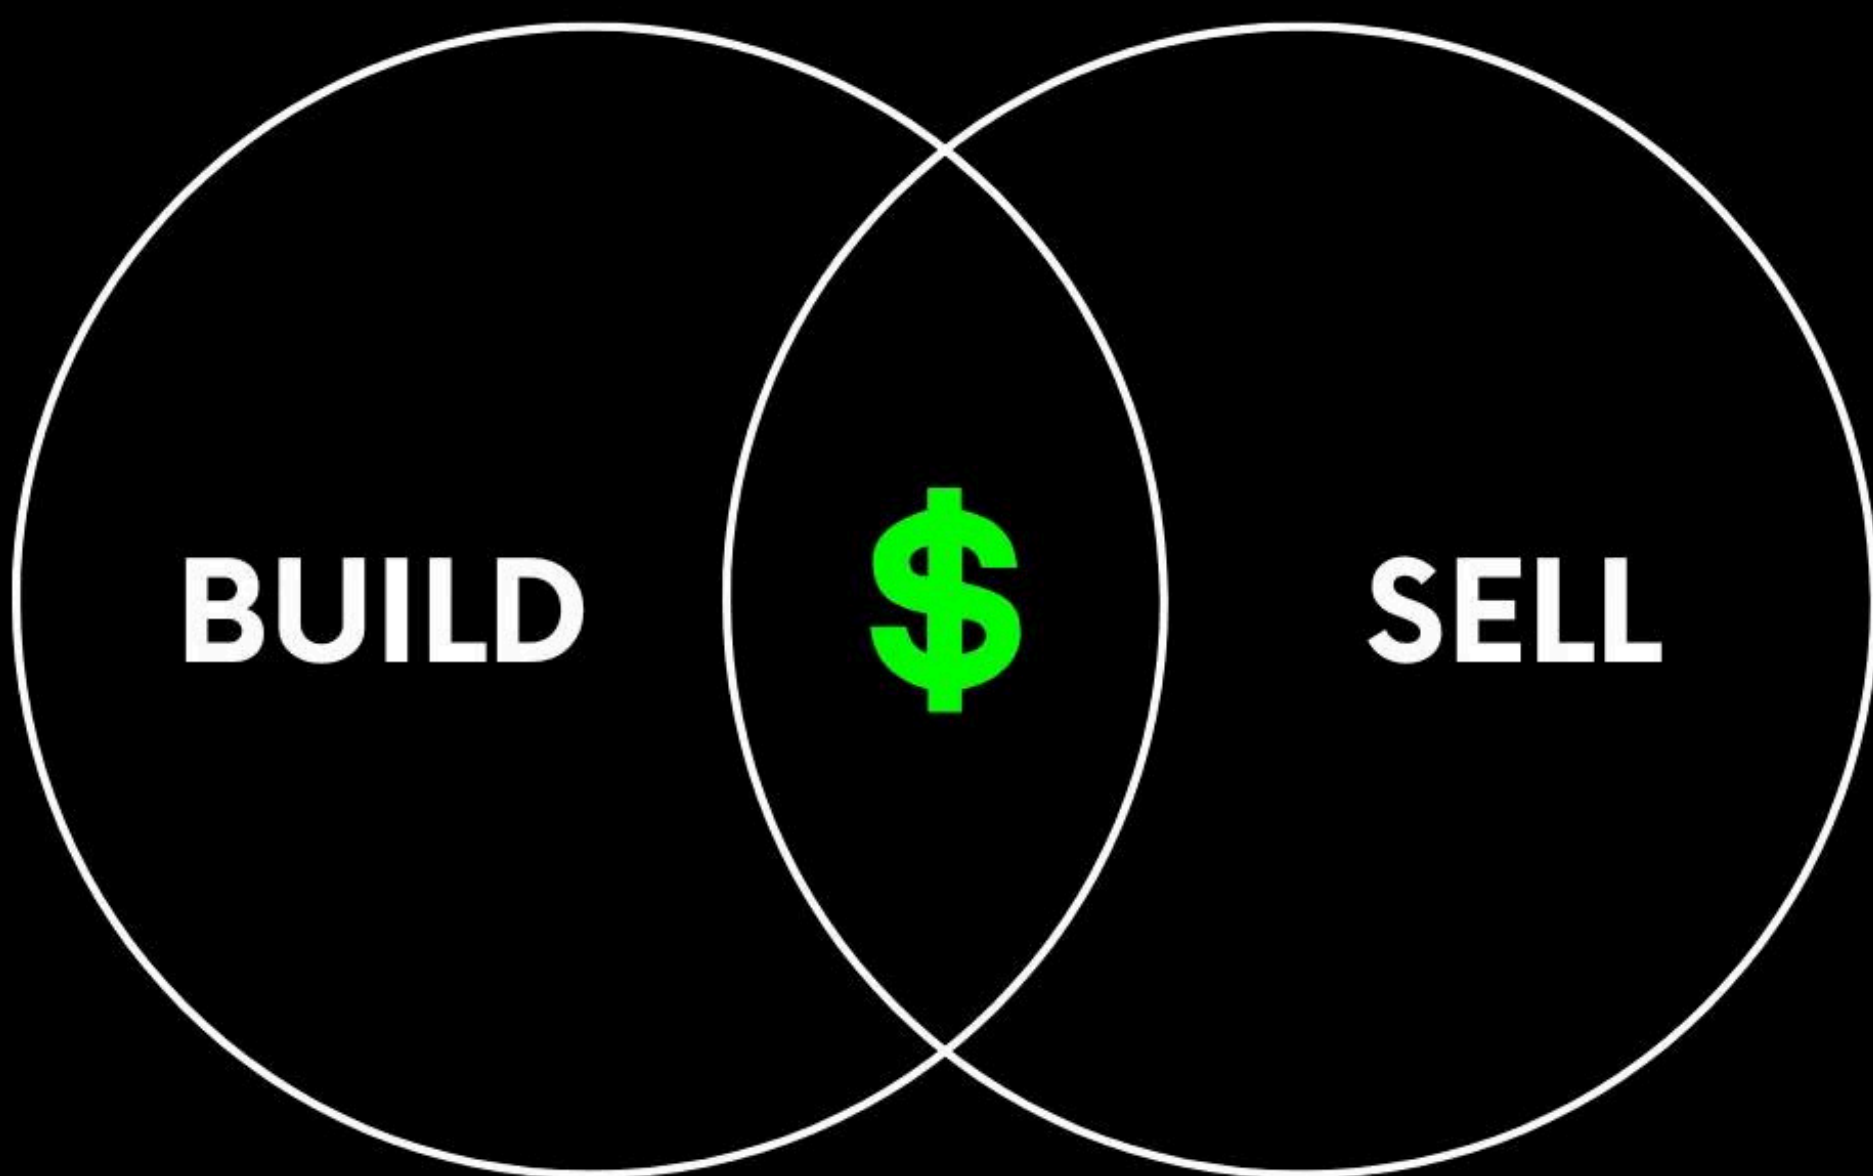

You only need 2 things to make money online.

- 1) Something to sell
- 2) People to sell it to

That's it.

Or how Naval likes to say it:

"Learn to sell. Learn to build. If you can do both, you will be unstoppable."

So you need to build an audience, which you can do if you implement what we talked about so far.

And you need an offer to sell to your audience.

So let's talk about offers now.

Offer Pyramid

If you do the above, you'll gain a lot of followers and email subscribers.

So now it's time to turn these into customers and clients.

For this, you need to create your Offer Pyramid.

These are multiple offers based on the transformation you help people with.

- Courses
- Workshops
- Consulting

You can also add DFY offers or cohorts.

It's up to you what you want.

I recommend clients a combination of courses, workshops, and a high-ticket offer.

- Courses make passive income
- High-ticket offer makes money fast
- Workshops turn customers into clients

You can get to digital freedom in 6 months with this combination.

Offer Pyramid

Here's an overview of what your Offer Pyramid can look like:

The prices aren't set in stone, you can also sell $1k courses or $99/mo communities.

The idea is that you have different types of offers.

High-ticket makes the most, but not everyone can spend $1k/mo to get your help.

So it makes sense to also have cheaper offers.

This also gives people a chance to try out your stuff.

This is how you can turn low-ticket customers into high-ticket clients.

Practical Gameplan

I've told you a lot, so I thought it might be nice to give you a short overview of what you can do on a daily and weekly basis to grow exponentially.

Daily (1-2 hours):

- Write 3-5 tweets
- Learn about your skill
- Spend 10 minutes on DMS
- RT 1 or 2 tweets from friends
- DM at least one new person
- Write 20-60 good comments
- Respond to all comments you get
- Follow 10 accounts if you're under 200 followers

Weekly:

- Write 2+ threads
- Write one newsletter
- Write 2+ long-form tweets
- Update your dream 100 list

You'll crush it if you do this consistently.

If you lack time, focus on:

- Writing tweets
- Learning one skill
- Leaving comments
- DM'ing a few people

I use Hypefury (aff) to schedule my content and I highly recommend it because it saves hours per week.

Final Important Words

Thanks for reading everything! If you write me a testimonial on what you learned from me, I'll give you the Hook Mastery ebook for free.

We covered a lot in this book, but there is still much more to learn. For more:

- X Growth System: best X growth strategies and system to gain 44,000+ followers in 2h per day.
- Aesthetic Writing: best writing strategies to write viral content (got me 70M views in 90 days).
- Productize Knowledge: turn your knowledge into high-quality courses that sell while you sleep.

I hit 44,000 followers and 6-figures and I learned a ton, but I also made a ton of mistakes.

I help my clients achieve these results significantly faster than me by eliminating the mistakes from the process.

Click on 'DM ME' and send 'WW' if you want my personalized help to add tens of thousands of X followers and 6-figures (without sales calls).

Best of luck regardless & talk to you soon my friend!

Stijn Noorman

DM ME